SCHOOL OF ADMINISTRATION CREATES TWO DEPARTMENTS

Two faculty members have been appointed the first chairmen of newly-formed departments in the School of Administration, under the school's first departmentalization.

James Finley, Professor of Administration, will head the Department of Public Administration, and Jack McDonnell, Associate Professor of Administration, will head the Department of Business Administration, President John M. Pfau has announced. Both appointments are for a three-year term beginning in September, 1976.

Dr. Finley, who joined the CSCSB faculty in 1973, will head a department of five full-time and two part-time professors. Dr. McDonnell, who came to Cal State from General Dynamics Corporation seven years ago, will chair a department of 19 full-time and 9 part-time faculty.

Both appointees have rich and wide experience in their fields. Dr. Finley earned his doctorate in public administration from American University. His positions have included management analyst for U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey and U.S. Environmental Sciences Services. Dr. McDonnell, who served as Director of the College's Management Center for one and a half years and director of the master's degree program in administration in 1974-75, received his Ph.D. at Claremont.

Hal Hoverland, dean of the school, in announcing formation of the new departments, states that the school is strongly committed to the idea of a liberally-educated executive and points out that the courses of study are aimed at turning out literate and articulate graduates. "They will face a variety of problems in business and the school tries to provide a background which will prepare them for immediate and future careers. While readying the graduate for first-job competency, we concentrate on a wide spectrum of curriculum, not narrow specialization," states Dean Hoverland.
